here in New York, heiped, I am sorry to say, once or twice, by the supreme court of the nation, have thrown what at times have proved well nigh or altogether insurmountable obstacies in the path of necded social reform.

"I hold, not only that the courts in those matters have usurped or at least exercised in wholly wrong fashion, a power clearly abidings in the people, but that they have thus strained to the utmost (and indeed in my judgment, violated) the constitution in order to sustain a do-nothing philosophy which has everywhere completely broken down when applied to the actual conditions of modern life.

"When I was president, the man to whom I owed most for guidance as to the proper attitude that courts should take in matters such as these, was william M. Moody, afterwards justice of the supreme court, who during his broadship whork them of the supreme court.
